The Confucius Institute at the University of Szeged was officially opened on October 10th of 2012 as a result of the cooperation between University of Szeged and Shanghai International Studies University with the support of Hanban (Confucius Institute Headquarters). This is the second Confucius Institute in Hungary, and it was granted much attention and valuable support by the National Assembly of Hungary and the Shanghai Municipal People's Congress, during all the preparation and start-up process. For those interested in learning Chinese as a foreign language the Institute offers language classes taught by professional Chinese language teachers. Language classes are held both at the classrooms of the Confucius Institute and of the different faculty buildings of the university. Besides language teaching, the Institute emphasizes the importance of spreading Chinese culture to a wide audience: the Institute organizes a great variety of exciting programs free to attend by the public.
